COURSE FEATURE: FITNESS AND NUTRITION

Taught by Drew Conyers

This class is focused on the importance of proper nutrition to create a healthy body and physical activity by combining aerobic and anaerobic training throughout the semester. Topics discussed in this course include: function of all the essential nutrients, factors that influence food choices and nutritional status, making nutritional food choices, nutrients and nutrition guidelines, physical health and fitness. Students complete several projects throughout the semester such as creating recipes and making food (protein shakes, energy bars, etc.) and creating exercise plans that they implement and carry out during the semester in the gym or weight room.
